

Emily Barrett Brown completed both her Bachelor and Master of Music degrees in Viola Performance at Brigham Young University under the tutelage of Dr. David Dalton. Other teachers included Hiroko Primrose (violin) and Clyn Barrus (viola). While at the Music Academy of the West, she studied viola with Donald McInnes and later enjoyed summer studies with Robert Vernon and members of the Cleveland Orchestra at the Blossom Music Festival. She has performed as a soloist throughout the Middle East with the BYU Chamber Orchestra and was a 1st place winner at the National level of the MTNA Chamber Music Competition in 1994. Professionally, she has worked in a variety of settings including the Dallas Opera Orchestra, and Richardson Symphony. She was also co-principal violist of the Plano Chamber Orchestra from 1996-1998. In addition to teaching, Ms. Brown performs frequently as a recording artist and with several ensembles in the greater Salt Lake area, including The Utah Symphony, Utah Chamber Artists, Sinfonia Salt Lake and The Ballet West Orchestra.
